

Here's What Really Happened to Korey Wise

Who Really Attacked the Central Park Jogger?

Though there was no physical evidence to tie the boys to the crime, the mini-series depicts Fairstein of being immediately convinced of their guilt.

The interrogations Fairstein oversaw led to four of the five boys falsely confessing to the crime, resulting in lengthy prison sentences—until 2002 when a man named Matias Reyes confessed to the rape and his DNA supported his confession. Richardson, Santana, McCray, Salaam, and Wise were exonerated.

Now, Fairstein's role in the convictions is being reexamined. After When They See Us was released last weekend, #CancelLindaFairstein started trending on Twitter, with users calling for a boycott of the prosecutor-turned-novelist's books. Last week, her publisher Dutton told the Associated Press it had "terminated its relationship" with Fairstein. And now, her literary agency has reportedly dropped her, as well.

Here's what to know about Fairstein's involvement in the case, the backlash it sparked, and what she's said about it all.

Fairstein led the sex crimes unit of Manhattan's district attorney's office.

When jogger Trisha Meili was attacked in Central Park in 1989, Fairstein ran the city's sex crimes unit. She'd "earned a reputation as a fierce advocate for victims," according to a 2002 New Yorker profile. "Despite her long career in government, no one ever mistook Fairstein for a dull bureaucrat. She wore flashy clothes, socialized with the city's wealthy and powerful, and developed a profitable sideline as the author of best-selling legal thrillers."

Before the Central Park jogger case, Fairstein was involved in the much-publicized case of Robert Chambers, the so-called "Preppy killer," who was convicted of a murder on Manhattan's tony Upper East Side.

She continued to accuse the men of involvement in the jogger case.

After three decades of service, Fairstein left the D.A.'s office and focused on writing novels.

Fairstein has continued to defend her work on the Central Park jogger case. In fact, after Reyes confessed to the crimes and DNA supported his confession, Fairstein told the New Yorker, "I think Reyes ran with that pack of kids. He stayed longer when the others moved on. He completed the assault. I don't think there is a question in the minds of anyone present during the interrogation process that these five men were participants, not only in the other attacks that night but in the attack on the jogger."

The men and their lawyers have fiercely denied any involvement, and they were awarded a $41 million settlement from the city of New York in 2014.

Just last year, Fairstein defended the prosecution, writing in the New York Law Journal: "The confessions were not coerced ... The questioning was respectful, dignified, carried out according to the letter of the law and with sensitivity to the young age of the men."

Today, Fairstein is a novelist.

Fairstein lives in Manhattan and Martha's Vineyard and has written a series of books about the protagonist Alexandra Cooper, a fictional Manhattan assistant district attorney. Her most recent, Blood Oath, was released just last month. Her books have been New York Times bestsellers and have been translated to 12 languages. She's also written Devlin Quick Mysteries for kids.

In 2018, the Mystery Writers of America awarded her their prestigious Grand Master title, a lifetime achievement award. But just two days later, the group rescinded the award for the first time after the decision was met with fierce backlash from other authors because of Fairstein's involvement in the so-called Central Park Five case.

Writer Attica Locke tweeted: "As a member and 2018 Edgar winner, I am begging you to reconsider having Linda Fairstein serve as a Grand Master in next year's awards ceremony. She is almost singlehandedly responsible for the wrongful incarceration of the Central Park Five."

"After profound reflection, the Board has decided that M.W.A. cannot move forward with an award that lacks the support of such a large percentage of our members," the group said.

After backlash, Fairstein was dropped by her publisher and literary agency.

A week after the series' premiere, Fairstein's publisher Dutton announced it had ended its relationship with the novelist, after days of backlash. A week later, Deadline reported ICM Partners, Fairstein's literary agency, had dropped her, as well.

The hashtag #CancelLindaFairstein began trending after the series premiered, and a change.org petition called for publishers and booksellers to stop the production and sales of Fairstein's novels. As of this writing, more than 120,000 have signed it. The boycott has the support of at least two of the men she prosecuted, as well.

Ava DuVernay reached out to Fairstein about the mini-series.

Filmmaker DuVernay reached out to Fairstein when she was working on the miniseries. And Fairstein tried to control how she was portrayed, according to DuVernay.

"Yes, I reached out to [victim] Ms. [Trisha] Meili, I reached out to Ms. Fairstein, I reached out to [prosecutor] Ms. [Elizabeth] Lederer, I reached out to [detective] Mr. [Mike] Sheehan—a lot of the key figures on the other side," DuVernay told The Daily Beast. "I informed them that I was making the film, that they would be included, and invited them to sit with me and talk with me so that they could share their point of view and their side of things so that I could have that information as I wrote the script with my co-writers. Linda Fairstein actually tried to negotiate.

"She tried to negotiate conditions for her to speak with me, including approvals over the script and some other things. So you know what my answer was to that, and we didn't talk."

Fairstein accused DuVernay of orchestrating the public campaign against her in a separate interview with The Daily Beast.

"She's behind it," Fairstein told The Daily Beast. "Her lies are behind it all."

She called the series "a basket of lies," and "a totally and completely untrue picture of events and my participation."

Fairstein wrote an op-ed in the Wall Street Journal about her portrayal in the series.

In a piece titled "Netflix's False Story of the Central Park Five," Fairstein wrote: "Ms. DuVernay's film attempts to portray me as an overzealous prosecutor and a bigot, the police as incompetent or worse, and the five suspects as innocent of all charges against them. None of this is true."

A lawyer who represented four of the five men in their settlements responded in an interview with Esquire.

"We know Matias Reyes committed the crime because his DNA confirmed it. When the DA reinvestigated the case, they concluded that he acted alone. One, it was his modus operandi for his nine rapes and murders that he committed in that part of New York in winter and spring of 1989," Jonathan Moore told me. "By definition, those statements [in the op-ed] are false."

In response to the backlash, Fairstein has stepped down from her roles on various boards.

This week, Fairstein stepped down from her role on the board at Safe Horizon, a nonprofit supporting victims of domestic violence, Esquire has confirmed.

"I do not want to become a lightning rod to inflict damage on this organization, because of those now attacking my record of fighting for social justice for more than 45 years," Fairstein told the New York Post. She added that she was "sorry that the staff [of Safe Horizon], through their CEO Ariel Zwang, declined to meet with me to learn the truths behind the inflammatory and false narrative."

She told the paper she has also stepped down from roles at God's Love We Deliver, the Joyful Heart Foundation, and her alma mater, Vassar College. The president of Vassar confirmed in a statement that Fairstein left the position on the board, "given the recent widespread debate over her role in the Central Park case."

Fairstein didn't respond to Esquire's multiple requests for comment.

Ava DuVernay is not the least bit surprised that President Trump has doubled down on his stance regarding the men collectively labeled the Central Park Five, whose wrongful conviction in the 1989 rape and assault of Trisha Meili, and later exoneration, are recounted in the Netflix docudrama “When They See Us.”

“It’s expected,” she said with a shrug on Tuesday night, after a Women in Entertainment and Writers Guild of America West screening in Hollywood. “There’s nothing he says or does in relation to this case or the lives of Black people or people of color that has any weight to it. It’s not our reality, there’s no truth to it.”

DuVernay — who created the limited series, and directed all four parts — made the comments in response to Trump’s remarks earlier Tuesday, in which he refused to admit their innocence, or to apologize for placing full-page ads in four newspapers at the time that called for the executions of five teenagers of color: Antron McCray, Kevin Richardson, Yusef Salaam, Raymond Santana and Korey Wise.

“You have people on both sides of that — they admitted their guilt,” he told reporters at the White House. “If you look at Linda Fairstein and if you look at some of the prosecutors, they think the city should have never settled that case. So, we’ll leave it at that.”

TWEET LATER THAN EXPECTED

After DuVernay responded lightheartedly to moderator Jemele Hill’s question about Trump — “I’m surprised it took so long, I was waiting every day to get a tweet!” — she asserted that the five men were always innocent, and are free today. Therefore, the focus should be “so much more than rage-tweeting back and participating in the negativity that’s so unproductive.”

FALLOUT FOR AUTHORITIES

The four-part Netflix project debuted on May 31 to critical acclaim and soon led to real-world fallout for the authorities involved.

Fairstein, the head of the sex crimes unit in the Manhattan district attorney’s office at the time of the case, and who had prospered in her second career as a crime novelist, was dropped by her book publisher and her agency after a viewer-led petition went viral. (It currently has more than 200,000 signatures.)

She also resigned from her board positions at Vassar College and charitable organizations God’s Love We Deliver and Safe Horizon.

Fairstein subsequently penned a Wall Street Journal op-ed calling “When They See Us” “a series so full of distortions and falsehoods as to be an outright fabrication. ... Ms. DuVernay does not define me, and her film does not speak the truth.”

Similarly, Elizabeth Lederer, the lead prosecutor in the case, was fired from her teaching post at Columbia Law School, after a petition by the Columbia University Black Students' Organization calling for her removal received nearly 10,000 signatures.

Students previously pressed the university to remove Lederer in 2013, without success.

Why are such steps of "restorative justice" only happening now, even though the Central Park Five were exonerated by DNA evidence and a confession from the true perpetrator in 2002 and were the subject of a well-received Ken Burns documentary in 2012?

WHY DOCUMENTARY RESONATES

Locke explained that this project in particular might be resonating with audiences to the point of demanding action because of its detailed exploration of gaslighting.

"We are living in a time of cognitive dissonance, which is how you have Linda Fairstein's ass talking all the stuff she's talking about," Locke said. "Lies [are] so easily bent to where you question your own sanity," she continued. "That's another reason why I think it resonates in this particular time: We are living in another time where we are being gaslit on a daily ... basis."

"This exact thing could happen, and things that are very similar to this are happening right now as we sit here," Swicord added.

DuVernay also shared that she has grown close to the five free men, texting them almost daily.

"They're all different, they're all beautiful, and they've taught me so much over the years," she said. "It's an honor to know them. It's a privilege."

Obama on Call-Out Culture: ‘That’s Not Activism’

The former president challenged young activists for being judgmental. “You should get over that quickly,” he said.

By Emily S. Rueb and Derrick Bryson Taylor

Oct. 31, 2019

Former President Barack Obama made a rare foray into the cultural conversation this week, objecting to the prevalence of “call-out culture” and “wokeness” during an interview about youth activism at the Obama Foundation summit on Tuesday.

For more than an hour, Mr. Obama sat onstage with the actress Yara Shahidi and several other young leaders from around the world. The conversation touched on “leadership, grass roots change and the power places have to shape our journeys,” the Obama Foundation said, but it was his remarks about young activists that have ricocheted around the internet, mostly receiving praise from a cohort of bipartisan and intergenerational supporters.

“This idea of purity and you’re never compromised and you’re always politically ‘woke’ and all that stuff,” Mr. Obama said. “You should get over that quickly.”

“The world is messy; there are ambiguities,” he continued. “People who do really good stuff have flaws. People who you are fighting may love their kids, and share certain things with you.”

Mr. Obama spoke repeatedly of the role of social media in activism specifically, including the idea of what’s become known as “cancel culture,” which is much remarked upon, but still nebulously defined. It tends to refer to behavior that mostly plays out on the internet when someone has said or done something to which others object. That person is then condemned in a flurry of social media posts. Such people are often referred to as “canceled,” a way of saying that many others (and perhaps the places at which they work) are fed up with them and will have no more to do with them.

[What’s cancel culture really like? Ask a teenager. They know.]

Mr. Obama talked about conversations he’s had with his daughter Malia, who is a student at Harvard with Ms. Shahidi.

“I do get a sense sometimes now among certain young people, and this is accelerated by social media, there is this sense sometimes of: ‘The way of me making change is to be as judgmental as possible about other people,’” he said, “and that’s enough.”

“Like, if I tweet or hashtag about how you didn’t do something right or used the wrong verb,” he said, “then I can sit back and feel pretty good about myself, cause, ‘Man, you see how woke I was, I called you out.’”

Then he pretended to sit back and press the remote to turn on a television.

“That’s not activism. That’s not bringing about change,” he said. “If all you’re doing is casting stones, you’re probably not going to get that far. That’s easy to do.”

The audience erupted in applause, which was echoed by conservative pundits like Ann Coulter.

“Good for Obama,” Ms. Coulter tweeted on Wednesday night, adding a parenthetical: “Not sarcastic!”

Tomi Lahren, a conservative political commentator, said on “Fox & Friends” on Wednesday that Mr. Obama’s comments made him look like “the voice of reason” and that “that’s when you know the Democratic Party has gotten this bad.”

“What’s really nice to hear is Barack Obama standing up for our rights and our values of the First Amendment,” Ms. Lahren said. “Just remember that we used to think Barack Obama was bad.”

Tulsi Gabbard, a Democratic presidential candidate and a congresswoman from Mr. Obama’s home state of Hawaii, seized on his words as a campaign message for her supporters.

“In a nutshell, Obama is saying we all need a little more aloha spirit,” she tweeted. “Being respectful & caring for one another. Not being so quick to judge. Not seeing everything as black/white. I hope you’ll join me in bringing the spirit of aloha to the White House.”

Another Democratic presidential candidate, Andrew Yang, also championed the message on Twitter.

“He is right on all counts,” Mr. Yang said.

Others called out the 44th president for being “paternalistic.”

Michael Arceneaux, the author of “I Can’t Date Jesus: Love, Sex, Family, Race, and Other Reasons I’ve Put My Faith in Beyoncé,” said he didn’t “need lessons about ‘being woke’ and ‘cancel culture’” in an op-ed for The Independent.

“I am never quite sure if Obama really thinks this naïvely or if he’s trying to convince certain sects of the population — notably young black folks, whom he just loves to lecture — that it’s better to coddle white people about their prejudices with the hopes of growth rather than speak our minds as we see fit,” he said.

Since leaving office in January 2017, the former president has mostly remained out of the public fray. Most of his appearances have focused on discussing the integrity of the political system and similar themes.

Following tradition, Mr. Obama initially refrained from publicly criticizing his successor. But during the run-up to the 2018 midterms, he called President Donald J. Trump a threat to American values while speaking to students at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

He has occasionally returned to the campaign trail to rally black voters and, more recently, has been working behind the scenes to advise Democratic presidential hopefuls. But he has yet to make an endorsement.

She's in need of some serious introspection. I remember the lame defense last Fall of her other successful convictions. They don't negate the 5 and there's plenty of other lawyers in the world. SO glad for her misfortune finally.

 Shes racist. She believes the Ideology of a black man being nothing but a criminal, that's why it was so easy for her to see those little boys as rapists. To her, black men are criminals, regardless of their age... now she's trying to play victim by relying on racist ideologies.

Ramani Wilson started this petition to Barnes & Noble and 2 others

Prosecutor Linda Fairstein coerced and convicted five innocent black boys of a crime they did not commit in 1989. The Central Park jogger criminal case involved the assault and rape of a Caucasian woman Trisha Meili, and was one of the most widely publicized cases of the decade. Fairstein accused five boys ranging from ages 14 to 16 of the rape and assault, and abused their legal rights as she manipulated them without the presence of their guardians. Korey Wise, Yusef Salaam, Raymond Santana, Antron McCray and Kevin Richardson were wrongfully convicted in 1989 and served sentences that ranged from 6 to 14 years in the system. Despite a serial rapist confessing to the crime and their records being exonerated, Fairstein still profits off of the promotion and sale of her many books as an author. In Netflix's recent film When They See Us (2019), Ava DuVernay highlights the lives that were dehumanized for decades because of this woman. We are asking Barnes and Noble, Amazon, Audible and any other outlets that allow this woman to profit through their organizations to remove her books from their platforms. Show consumers of color what our rights and stories mean to you!

Linda Fairstein Central Park five book removal

239,863 have signed. Let's get to 300,000!

Ryan Swink started this petition to Amazon & all other book retailers and 1 other Linda Fairstein achieved her fame & fortune through her wild imagination & at the expense of five INNOCENT children's pain... let's start off with why this petition was started, Linda Fairstein led a witch hunt against five teenage boys even though the physical evidence didn't support her theory she raged on with one goal in mind & that was to get a conviction at any expense even the lives of teenage boys... she led the hunt that fundamentally changed these men's lives forever & unfairly tarnished their reputation, you could almost say she hunted these boys for their lives & after securing the conviction she wanted & the spotlight being off the case Linda decided to do what she does best tell story's, she became a fictional true crime writer once again using that imagination. I believe it to be fact that she's led this whole entire crusade out of the aspiration of financial gain knowing the media coverage the case would generate & knowing if she secured a conviction regardless of the evidence her book career on true crime (her career field) would flourish... I believe her actions were led by her greed & desire to relevant maybe even famous & I believe these character flaws of hers led her to KNOWINGLY & WRONGFULLY hunt these boys into a conviction & because of her shameful past I am starting a petition to ask ALL retailers & book publishers to stop selling Linda Fairstein books or any product that has ties to her ...

Central Park Five film sparks call to boycott ex-prosecutor Linda Fairstein's books

Author Linda Fairstein attends the 12th annual Authors In Kind Literary Luncheon at The Metropolitan Club on April 14, 2015, in New York City. A petition to urge booksellers and Fairstein's publishers to drop her books has gained traction on the website Change.org. (Stephen Lovekin / Getty Images)

JUNE 6, 2019 | 10:49 AM

P-APP003103

Critics of former New York City prosecutor Linda Fairstein are calling for a boycott of the attorney's mystery novels after a new Netflix drama series reignited controversy about her prosecution of the Central Park Five in 1990.

CNN reports that a petition to urge booksellers and Fairstein's publishers to drop her books has gained traction on the website Change.org.

"Linda Fairstein led a witch hunt against five teenage boys even though the physical evidence didn't support her theory she raged on with one goal in mind & that was to get a conviction at any expense even the lives of teenage boys," reads the petition, written by Ryan Swink. "I am starting a petition to ask ALL retailers & book publishers to stop selling Linda Fairstein books or any product that has ties to her."

Fairstein was the head of the sex crimes unit of the Manhattan district attorney's office, and led the prosecution of five New York teenagers who were charged with the brutal rape and beating of Trisha Meili, a woman who was attacked while jogging in Central Park. Four of the arrested teens were African American and one was Latino.

Four of the five youths confessed to the crime, but retracted their confessions shortly thereafter, saying they were coerced. All five were found guilty but their convictions were vacated in 2002 after an imprisoned rapist and murderer admitted he was the one who attacked Meili.

Writer Linda Fairstein's past as a prosecutor overseeing the Central Park Five case causes award controversy »

The case has always been controversial, but it returned to the headlines recently after the debut of "When They See Us," a miniseries based on the trial written and directed by Ava DuVernay and featuring actress Felicity Huffman as Fairstein.

After the trial, Fairstein became a novelist, writing over 20 crime novels, most of which feature the character Alexandra Cooper, a New York prosecutor.

ADVERTISEMENT

While “When They See Us” has returned the case to the national spotlight, Fairstein has been criticized for years by supporters of the Central Park Five who maintain that the prosecutor ignored the lack of any physical evidence tying the teenagers to the assault, and relied on false and coerced confessions to prosecute the youths.

In November, the Mystery Writers of America announced it was withdrawing its planned Grand Master award for Fairstein, following criticism from authors like Attica Locke, the mystery novelist, who objected to the honor on Twitter.

“I am begging you to reconsider having Linda Fairstein serve as a Grand Master in next year’s awards ceremony. She is almost singlehandedly responsible for the wrongful incarceration of the Central Park Five,” Locke wrote. “Just because she has a flourishing publishing career does not mean we should ignore her past — or her continued unwillingness to accept responsibility for ruining five innocent men’s lives.”

Supporters of the boycott of Fairstein’s books took to Twitter to voice their opinions of the ex-prosecutor, using the hashtag #CancelLindaFairstein:

Simon & Schuster: Drop Central Park Five Prosecutor Linda Fairstein

#CancelLindaFairstein

DEMAND SIMON & SCHUSTER AND RANDOM HOUSE DROP
CENTRAL PARK FIVE
PROSECUTOR LINDA FAIRSTEIN.

COLOR

*UPDATE: 6/7/2019 Dutton, a division of Penguin Random House, announced they will no longer be publishing books by Linda Fairstein and dropped their publishing contract. Simon & Schuster still has not made public comment.

Linda Fairstein was one of the top prosecutors of the Central Park Five case and oversaw the young boys' interrogation. She falsely prosecuted these young innocent Black boys and lied and altered evidence illegally to gain convictions and false confessions. But that's not all. Fairstein was also instrumental in covering up Harvey Weinstein's sexual misconduct and worked directly as a consultant with his legal team to have the case dead in weeks. Now, retired from her position as prosecutor and head of sex crimes unit for the Manhattan District Attorney, a position she held from 1976-2002, she is profiting off her years as corrupt prosecutor by writing best-selling crime novels with the publishing houses Simon & Schuster and Penguin Random House. Despite Fairstein's long history of corruption in the Manhattan DA's office she has still been able to publish over ten books with Simon & Schuster publishing house.

Antron McCray, Kevin Richardson, Yusef Salaam, Raymond Santana, and Korey Wise, all of whom were between the age of 14-16 years old, spent between 7-14 years in a cage for a crime they didn't commit. And Linda Fairstein made, and continues to make, thousands of dollars writing and selling crime novels with Simon & Schuster and Random House based on her experiences as a corrupt prosecutor. Fairstein has built a false persona as a crusader for sexual assault victims when in reality she allowed real predators, like Harvey Weinstein, to walk free while making fake convictions against young innocent Black people. Fairstein does not deserve to have a platform and should not be making money off the backs of young Black people who's lives she ruined.

This isn't the first time Simon & Schuster has been pushed to drop racist writers from their roster. In 2017 they gave white supremacist Milo Yiannopoulos a six-figure book deal to express his racist, misogynistic, anti-Trans and xenophobic beliefs. However, Color Of Change, along with the support of our members, was able to get Milo's book deal canceled. We can win again if we stand together. Join us in demanding Simon & Schuster and Penguin Random House drop Linda Fairstein.

Linda Fairstein was one of the top prosecutors and oversaw the interrogation of the Central Park Five case. She falsely prosecuted young innocent Black boys and lied and altered evidence illegally to gain conviction and false confessions. Now, retired from her position as prosecutor and head of sex crimes unit for the Manhattan District Attorney, a position she held from 1976-2002, she is profiting off her years as a corrupt prosecutor by writing best-selling crime novels with your publishing house. We urge you to immediately drop Linda Fairstein.

The coerced confessions that Fairstein unjustly secured resulted in the wrongful convictions of the Central Park Five, Antron McCray, Kevin Richardson, Yusef Salaam, Raymond Santana, and Korey Wise, all of whom were between the age of 14-16 years old and had to serve between 6 months to 13 years in prison for a crime they had nothing to do with. Now, 30 years later, all of the men are free and received $41 million from New York City for malicious and false prosecution, racial discrimination, and emotional distress--much of this is due to the racist and malicious work of Linda Fairstein who still refuses to apologize and claims the men to be guilty, despite all know evidence that they are innocent.

Racist prosecutors like Linda Fairstein should not be normalized, their experiences ruining the lives of Black people should not be glamorized and turned into best selling fiction novels, and they shouldn't be offered platforms by publishing houses. This is why we demand that you drop Linda Fairstein.

Thank you,

Publisher drops Central Park Five prosecutor Linda Fairstein

NEW YORK — Linda Fairstein has been dropped by her publisher as fallout continues for the former Central Park Five prosecutor over the wrongful conviction of five teens for the 1989 rape and beating of a female jogger.

On Friday, Dutton spokeswoman Amanda Walker confirmed a statement that the publisher's customer service line has been giving to inquiring callers, saying that it had "terminated its relationship" with the best-selling crime novelist. The publicist declined further comment.

Fairstein's most recent book, "Blood Oath," came out in March. Her other books, many featuring the sex crimes prosecutor Alex Cooper, include "Deadfall," "Killer Look" and "Devil's Bridge."

In a statement issued through Laura Rossi Public Relations, Fairstein said Friday that she and Dutton had "decided to terminate their relationship." The statement also says that "Fairstein is the author of 24 books, including 16 New York Times bestselling crime novels, as well as a nonfiction work that was a New York Times Notable Book of the Year."

Reached on her cell phone Friday, Fairstein declined further comment.

There has been renewed outcry regarding Fairstein's role in the racially divisive case following the release last month of Netflix's "When They See Us," a miniseries directed by Ava DuVernay that dramatizes the events surrounding the trial.

Fairstein had already resigned from at least two nonprofit boards as backlash intensified and a #CancelLindaFairstein movement spread on social media.

Last year, the Mystery Writers of America took the rare step of withdrawing a lifetime achievement after other authors protested, citing Fairstein's role in the Central Park case.

Fairstein was the top Manhattan sex crimes prosecutor when five black and Latino teenagers were charged with the attack on the white jogger, which became a symbol of the city's soaring crime in the late 1980s. Donald Trump, then known as a real estate developer, took out full-page newspaper ads calling for the death penalty.

The teens said their confessions were coerced and their convictions were overturned in 2002 after convicted murderer and serial rapist Matias Reyes confessed to committing the crime alone. DNA linked him to it.

Fairstein observed the boys' 1989 interrogation, conducted by another prosecutor and police. She didn't personally try the case.

Since its collapse, she has denied the teens were coerced and has defended authorities' conduct in the case, explored in a 2013 documentary by Ken Burns.

The city reached a roughly $41 million settlement with the five the next year, while not admitting any wrongdoing.

Linda Fairstein Dropped By Hollywood Literary Agency Amid 'When They See Us' Backlash

THE FORMER PROSECUTOR OF THE CENTRAL PARK FIVE CASE
CONTINUES TO EXPERIENCE THE FALLOUT OF THE CRITICALLY ACCLAIMED NETFLIX SERIES.

Former prosecutor Linda Fairstein has been dropped by her Hollywood literary agency ICM Partners, another blow in the fallout of Netflix's When They See Us.

The Ava Duvernay-directed dramatization of the Central Park Five jogger case includes a damaging portrayal of Feinstein's botched investigation of the five innocent Black boys wrongfully convicted of raping Trisha Meili, who was jogging alone in New York City's Central Park in April 1989.

Deadline confirmed that ICM Partners cut ties with Fairstein after several successful years as the Hollywood agency ran her post-prosecution career as a bestselling author.

The agency's move comes a day after Fairstein defended her involvement in the case with a tone-deaf op-ed for the *Wall Street Journal, calling DuVernay's depiction of the case "full of distortions and falsehoods."

Ava DuVernay reflects on the Central Park 5 incident from 1989

Fairstein has been the main focus of the backlash from the four-part series, which highlights the case's racist investigation. After losing their innocence and spending six to 13 years in prison each for the crimes, a serial rapist confessed to the crime, freeing the young men and exonerating them. Antron McCray, Yusef Salaam, Korey Wise, Raymond Santana, and Kevin Richardson eventually received a $41 million settlement from the city of New York in 2014.

The former prosecutor has already been forced to shut down her social media accounts and resigned from three non-profit boards. She was also recently dropped from her publisher and her Glamour magazine Woman of the Year award from 1993 was rescinded.

ICM Partners has yet to comment on their decision to drop Fairstein.

Linda Fairstein, the prosecutor responsible for the false prosecution of the 'Exonerated Five' (fka "the Central Park Five"), oversaw hundreds of cases during her tenure in the Manhattan DA's office. And there's no telling how many of those convictions should be overturned too.

Linda Fairstein committed a cruel act of injustice when she fought to prosecute the 5 innocent boys for a crime they did not commit. Linda used her power as a prosecutor to pursue these false convictions even though there was no physical evidence tying the boys to the rape. Even after the true rapist confessed, prompting a thorough investigation that illuminated every single place where the DA's office went wrong--including that none of the boys' coerced confessions actually matched the facts of the crime--Fairstein still to this day maintains that they were guilty of "something." This brazen denial of hard facts and evidence calls her judgment into question and the 30 years she wielded unchecked prosecutorial discretion and power.

That's why we're joining Justice League NYC and other partners across the country to demand that DA Cy Vance immediately reopen all of Fairstein's cases and conduct an independent audit. Ava Duvernay's powerful 4-part series When They See Us has brought Fairstein's wretched practices back out into the open and sparked new outrage. Prompted by the series, Linda has been forced to step down from the boards of 3 nonprofit organizations, Vassar College, dropped from one of her publishing companies, and have had awards rescinded. It's not enough just to affect Fairstein's ability to profit from this injustice--we have to make sure ALL of her past harms are undone. If there are any other people wrongfully convicted, like the 'Exonerated Five', then we must go back and clear their records. Will you join us in calling on Manhattan DA Cy Vance to do the right thing and review all of Fairstein's convictions?

To: Cy Vance, Manhattan District Attorney's OfficeFrom: [Your Name]

Dear Manhattan District Attorney Cy Vance,

I am calling on you to reopen every case Linda Fairstein was assigned during her tenure as Deputy District Attorney in the Manhattan office from 1972 to 2002 with an independent investigation and audit. During her tenure, Linda was responsible for securing the false convictions of 5 young innocent Black and Latino boys. Despite their case later being overturned and the men being completely exonerated due to DNA evidence, Linda has insisted that the men are still guilty. Her commitment to the false convictions she secured shows her commitment to injustice. You must reopen her cases to ensure there are not other people who've been wrongfully convicted of crimes at the hands of an overzealous prosecutor.

It is your responsibility now as Manhattan DA to ensure that your office was not responsible for false convictions. We urge you to immediately hire an independent investigator to reopen all of Linda's cases.

Central Park Five: Decision Not to Re-Open Linda Fairstein Case Blasted as a 'Disgrace'

Activists have called the decision not to re-open the case history of the two prosecutors involved in the wrongful conviction of the Central Park Five "a disgrace."

Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance announced in a letter on Friday that he will not review the thousands of cases handled by former New York Assistant D.A. Linda Fairstein during her time as chief of the office's Sex Crime unit from 1976 to 2002, as well as those by veteran prosecutor Elizabeth Lederer. He has also declined activists' calls for Lederer, who still works as an assistant D.A. in Vance's office, to be fired.

Both Fairstein and Lederer were involved in the prosecution and wrongful conviction of five black teenagers dubbed the Central Park Five, who were accused of the rape and assault of 28-year-old Trisha Meili in New York's Central Park in 1989.

The five youths, Antron McCray, Kevin Richardson, Yusef Salaam, Raymond Santana and Korey Wise, were pressured into giving false confessions by a prosecution spearheaded by Fairstein and Lederer, before being sentenced for a crime they did not commit.

The group spent a number of years behind bars and were only exonerated of the crime in 2002 when serial rapist and murderer Matias Reyes confessed to attacking Meili. The following year they sued New York City for malicious prosecution, racial discrimination and emotional distress, with the case being settled for $41 million in 2014.

The plight of the five has been brought back under the public spotlight following the release on Netflix of Ava DuVernay's miniseries When They See Us, which dramatizes how the five were wrongfully prosecuted and convicted for a crime they did not commit.

Following the news that Vance will not re-open the cases of Fairstein and Lederer, activist and public advocate Jumaane Williams, who put in the initial request, told Newsweek, "I was extremely disappointed. The response was a disgrace to the office [of Manhattan D.A.] and for justice to the Central Park Five."

"I firmly believe Elizabeth Lederer should be fired but I understand that may take more time. But the fact there wasn't even a re-opening of the cases handled by Fairstein—that is atrocious. If Vance won't review it then he is part of the problem that we see in When They See Us," he added.

Williams said that he and his fellow activists would not give up their efforts to have the cases reviewed and that they were working out their next steps.

"Myself and other advocates hope he reconsiders this. We will ask either the governor for an executive order for the cases to be re-opened or ask for the state to get involved," he said.

"This is not a local story, or a national story, but an international story. Everyone is talking about this travesty of justice and if it happens once, it can happen again," added Williams.

When They See Us has become a national sensation since it first aired on the web streaming platform on May 31, with Netflix announcing on June 12 that the drama has been their most watched series on Netflix in the U.S. every day since it premiered.

The airing of the show has led to a backlash against Fairstein and Lederer. Seventy-two-year-old Fairstein, who has gone on to become a successful crime novelist, was dropped by her publisher following an outcry over her involvement in the prosecution of the Central Park Five. Lederer has also left her job at Columbia Law School following a petition asking the school to fire her.

Writing for the Wall Street Journal, Fairstein called When They See Us an "outright fabrication."

Petition Delivery: Tell DA Cy Vance to Reopen Linda Fairstein's Cases NOW

On Wednesday, September 25, Color Of Change and The Gathering for Justice will deliver over 42,000 petition signatures to the office of Manhattan District Attorney Cy Vance. We are demanding that DA Cy Vance immediately reopen Central Park Five then-prosecutor Linda Fairstein's cases.

WHEN: Wednesday, September 25th at 11:00am EST

WHERE: Manhattan District Attorney's Office - 100 Centre St., New York, NY 10013

Linda Fairstein, responsible for the false prosecution of the 'Exonerated Five' (fka "the Central Park Five), oversaw hundreds of cases during her tenure in the Manhattan DA's office. And there's no telling how many of those convictions should be overturned too. We refuse to stand by idly while even one person is unjustly incarcerated or languishes in the criminal legal system due to Linda's failure as a prosecutor. With all that we know of Fairstein's past as a prosecutor, DA Cy Vance should use his authority, stand on the side of justice, and reopen Linda's cases so his office isn't responsible for another false prosecution.

We need to keep the pressure up and remind Cy Vance that we will not give up and will continue to hold him accountable for the past actions of his office's prosecutors.

Will you join us in calling on DA Cy Vance to reopen her cases?

Linda Fairstein is currently sitting on the board of trustees of Vassar College. She oversaw the prosecution of the Central Park jogger case as portrayed by actress Felicity Huffman on the miniseries When They See Us, which exposes our broken U.S. legal system.

During a trial hearing in 1993, Yousef Salaam said he "was concerned about a criminal justice system that would tolerate the conduct of the prosecutor, Linda Fairstein, who deliberately engineered the 15-year-old's confession ... Fairstein wanted to make a name. She didn't care." Salaam still maintains that she blocked his mother, aunt, and Big Brother mentor from seeing him during his interrogations and wrote that the police did not let him have food or sleep for more than 24 hours.

As of July 2018, she still maintains that her team did nothing wrong and that "the questioning [of the Central Park Five] was respectful, dignified, carried out according to the letter of the law and with sensitivity to the young age of the men."

Other organizations have recognized her central involvement in the case and have rescinded awards in the past such as the Grand Master Award given to writers of mystery fiction.

As a member of the Vassar community, I do not wish for the college to be formally associated with her. The boys she wrongfully helped imprison are our neighbors, brothers, sons. They are now men that have been robbed of a life. I am writing this petition because I was emboldened by Vassar to do so. I remember the words of Van Jones, CEO of Reform Alliance, this past commencement. I have been taught to fight against injustice by my amazing professors and classmates. I call on Vassar alums and current students to demand that she be taken off the board of trustees.
